

A Bio-Energy therapy helping to improve holistic health

About the Treatment

The study of "Bio Energy" has been on-going for several hundred years. In recent times, with great advances in technology, we have become better equipped to observe and understand the effects of electro-magnetic impulses on living tissues and how the body responds to exterior energy sources.

There are a great many claims made about bio-energy treatments but it is important to understand the basics of human physicality when studying this area. The human body is made up of between 70 and 80% water. It is the medium in which all biological function takes place and it not only conducts the flow of molecules around the body but it also manages the body's energy field and the performance of both affects our overall health.

This treatment introduces a regulating bio-magnetic field to the body through the feet, a most receptive part of our anatomy and an acknowledged gateway to the circulatory and nervous systems.

A saline solution permits a carefully controlled flow of ions between anode and cathode. This recurring, reflective "pulse" of ions invigorates, re-conditions and synchronises the body's natural ionic flow.

Short treatments of 15 or 30 minutes in 72-hour + cycles have generated best results in clinical trials.

Allopathic medical experts are now acknowledging and taking great interest in the overwhelming evidence in case studies where bio-energy therapy has triggered and contributed to improved health. Pioneers in the field including Gerber and Rife* worked tirelessly in the belief of the healing potential of vibration medicine and Detox Systems products were developed to bring this form of healing to the general market.

About the Product

Detox Systems was born out of a partnership between bio-energy health experts, electrical engineers and a product design team. Our new systems (both professional and home) are the final outcome of many months' research and study. The organisation continues to work closely with our business customers and partners together with whom we continually forge new improvements and modifications to our developing technology. Detox Systems products balance form with function to ensure that we deliver devices offering safety, reliability, quality and performance. Our systems are CE certified and we insist on using medically-approved power sources only. Each unit is put through rigorous testing prior to dispatch. Bio-energy treatment has become more commonplace with therapy practitioners across the globe and Detox Systems continues to break new ground in this expanding market.

The Baby-D system was created to service the expanding market demand for a safe, convenient and easy-to-operate home system for self-treatments. Simple to operate, it has been received well in all markets. An added advantage here is that Detox Systems manufacture and distribute high quality but low-cost replacement electro-magnetic diffusers or "arrays" keeping the on-going cost of home treatment as low as possible.

We manufacture all components here in the UK refusing to bow to inferior quality imports. Our design features a number of unique variables so that operators can discover their optimum treatment-type. It is simple to use and effortless to maintain.

Our keen pricing policy reflects that we are a hard-working SME looking to win market share for delivering prestige quality for a sensible price.

GENERAL INFORMATION

As with any commercial market experiencing a boom in trade levels, factual information and propaganda have become intertwined. At market inception, some manufacturers inaccurately focused on the water-colour factor and not the unseen electro-magnetic process. At Detox Systems, we state that colour-change is, in part, a visual indication that the system is working efficiently. It is dependent on many factors including water ph and temperature, salt levels and patient condition.

Detoxification occurs through the catalytic introduction of the bio-energy machine. Its action on the body re-energises our own natural system and helps optimise the performance of the body's lymphatic system and it promotes better blood circulation.

We live in an age where the body is having to adapt to accommodate the changing nature of modern living. Bio-Energy is a non-intrusive, rapidly-emerging treatment designed to help the inner body perform better.

As a long-standing manufacturer in this field, we know of no negative effects resulting from correct use of our systems. We firmly believe that Bio-Energy treatment does help. As medical and homeopathic understanding improves, it deserves examination and respect for results so far. It is without doubt that future permutations of our product will become commonplace in years to come.
